ter D-Day.

Throughout history, military conflict has had a profound effect on the men and women of rural America. The first-hand experience of those who served brought changes not only to them as individuals but also the communities from which they came.

Their stories, and the stories of the places these men and women called home are the basis for an extraordinary museum experience where you can listen to Veterans re-tell their stories...in their own words.

"ITOW is a museum so extraordinary that people from across the nation will hear and see in these exhibits an echo of their own experiences."
